

Jax was surrendered to the humane society the last weekend of 2017. One day early January we saw a Facebook post and there he was in this girl's arms. I had to decide if I was ready for a new dog because I've lost my other chihuahua back in August. But it was nearly 5 months after so I decided 15 mins after seeing that post I wanted to see him. I saw him and omg I knew I wanted him! I remember I couldn't take him home right away but when we did, I was just so happy. Jax came home on January 27, 2018. He was very scared and reactive to most people and dogs. But slowly, with time and patience he became a lot friendlier and realize the world is not that scary. He's still a piece of work but we love him so much. He loves to play, loves to squeak his toys, destroyed many toys in the 2.5 months we've had him, loves his daily walks, he's just so happy. I never thought I would adopt a shelter dog but now I am glad I did.
