

Hello everyone. Just a little update on Larry.

He is doing great..very happy, funny, and playful dog..he is very affectionate and was glued to me at first but now that he knows he is safe he will actually relax a little and let me go to the bathroom by myself lol...(sometimes). he is smart and has learned a lot..he will respectfully sit while I place his food bowl and look me in the eyes until I say "ok get it " before he gets up and goes to the bowl..he has learned hand signals for sit, shake a paw, lay down and sit pretty ..which he also does on verbal command..we are working on stay, rollover, and leave it ..I have started to kennel train him and he doesn't seem to mind being left for a little while ..which is good for when I have an appointment. I had to take him to the vet for a booster and get his ears and feet checked ( possible food allergy ) and the vet said he seemed a lot calmer than the first time she saw him. Although I am cautious when outside..he does not run off, stays close and has good recall. He likes to go for walks, play fetch and squirrel watch from his bed in the diningroom. He is a counter thief so I make sure to remove temptation and I make sure I take the garbage out more often lol.. All in all Larry is a great dog that had a few faults that were not that difficult to deal with. thanks for letting me take him home!
